

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF MICHIGAN
NORTHERN DIVISION

Plaintiff,

v.

Case No. 2:04-cv-117
HON. RICHARD ALAN ENSLEN

B. HOBSON, et. al.,

Defendants.

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

Plaintiff filed this pro se prisoner civil rights action, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983, against Michigan Department of Corrections (MDOC) employees Bruce Hobson, Denver McBurney, Wayne Trierweiler, Joe Suardini, David Bergh, Harry Irvine, James Rankin, Dan Stasewich and Kenna Jones, and former MDOC employee Barbara Bouchard. Defendants are sued in their individual and official capacities. Plaintiff is seeking compensatory damages from each defendant.

Plaintiff's complaint alleges that Defendants retaliated against him because he has been a jailhouse lawyer for 25 years and because he has filed 100-150 grievances against Defendant Bouchard and her subordinates. Plaintiff further asserts that, on October 10, 2003, Defendants Irvine and Suardini forced him to be placed in a yard module next to the yard module where prisoner McGee was located, despite the fact that Defendants were allegedly aware that McGee had thrown feces on Plaintiff in the past. Plaintiff claims that he repeatedly requested to be returned to his cell because McGee was threatening to throw feces on him again. Plaintiff alleges that McGee subsequently assaulted him by throwing feces in his face and eyes and that Defendants failed to protect him from the assault. Plaintiff maintains that Defendants set him up for the assault as retaliation for filing countless grievances and lawsuits.

In addition, Plaintiff avers that the two misconduct tickets he received on October 10, 2003 , one for inciting to riot and the other for disobeying a direct order, were false and retaliatory. Plaintiff claims that Defendants retaliated against him when they failed to investigate the allegedly false misconduct reports, failed to pick up Plaintiff's witness statements, and failed to mail the hearings investigator his defense on the retaliatory misconducts, and when they falsified official reports. Plaintiff further alleges that Defendants denied him food, denied him medical care after a fall which resulted in a loose tooth and a cut lip, and placed him in soft restraints to penalize him for filing past grievances. In Count V of the complaint, Plaintiff claims that Defendant Bouchard allegedly engaged in a practice of conspiracies with Defendant Hobson and adopted a retaliatory policy of taking adverse action to penalize Plaintiff.

Defendants maintain that Plaintiff has more than three "strikes" under the "three strikes" rule set forth at 28 U.S.C. §1915(g) and is not entitled to proceed in forma pauperis under the "imminent danger" exception. However, the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals previously determined that Plaintiff's allegations of imminent physical violence were sufficient to meet the exception to the "three-strikes" rule. Because the Court cannot reverse the decision of the Sixth Circuit on this issue, Defendant's motion to dismiss under the "three strikes" rule is denied.

Defendants alternatively move for summary judgment pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(b). Summary judgment is appropriate only if the moving party establishes that there is no genuine issue of material fact for trial and that he is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c); Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322-323 (1986). If the movant carries the burden of showing there is an absence of evidence to support a claim or defense, then the party opposing the motion must demonstrate by affidavits, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, that there is a genuine issue of material fact for trial. Id. at 324-25. The nonmoving party cannot rest on its pleadings but must present “specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial.” Id. at 324 (quoting Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)). The evidence must be viewed in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 251-52 (1986). Thus, any direct evidence offered by the plaintiff in response to a summary judgment motion must be accepted as true. Muhammad v. Close, 379 F.3d 413, 416 (6th Cir. 2004) (citing Adams v. Metiva, 31 F.3d 375, 382 (6th Cir. 1994)). However, a mere scintilla of evidence in support of the nonmovant’s position will be insufficient. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 251-52. Ultimately, the court must determine whether there is sufficient “evidence on which the jury could reasonably find for the plaintiff.” Id. at 252. See also Leahy v. Trans Jones, Inc., 996 F.2d 136, 139 (6th Cir. 1993) (single affidavit, in presence of other evidence to the contrary, failed to present genuine issue of fact); cf. Moore, Owen, Thomas & Co. v. Coffey, 992 F.2d 1439, 1448 (6th Cir. 1993) (single affidavit concerning state of mind created factual issue).

Plaintiff claims that the major misconduct tickets he was issued were false and were issued in retaliation for past grievance filings. The Supreme Court has held that a claim for declaratory relief and monetary damages that necessarily implies the invalidity of the punishment imposed, is not cognizable under § 1983 until the conviction has been overturned. Edwards v. Balisok, 520 U.S. 641, 648 (1997) (addressing allegations of deceit and bias on the part of the decisionmaker in a misconduct hearing). The Court relied upon Heck v. Humphrey, 512 U.S. 477, 486-87 (1994), which held that “in order to recover damages for allegedly unconstitutional conviction or imprisonment, or for other harm caused by actions whose unlawfulness would render a conviction or sentence invalid, a § 1983 plaintiff must prove that the conviction or sentence has been [overturned].” Edwards, 520 U.S. at 646 (emphasis in original). As the Supreme Court recently has stated, “[t]hese cases, taken together, indicate that a state prisoner’s § 1983 action is barred (absent prior invalidation) – no matter the relief sought (damages or equitable relief), no matter the target of the prisoner’s suit (state conduct leading to conviction or internal prison proceedings) – if success in that action would necessarily demonstrate the invalidity of confinement or its duration.” Wilkinson v. Dotson, 125 S. Ct. 1242, 1248 (2005). Thus, where a prisoner’s claim of unfair procedures in a disciplinary hearing necessarily implies the invalidity of the deprivation of good-time credits, his claim is not cognizable under § 1983. Id.; see also Bailey v. McCoy, No. 98-1746, 1999 WL 777351, at *2 (6th Cir. Sept. 21, 1999) (collecting Sixth Circuit decisions applying Edwards to procedural due process challenges), cert. denied, 122 S. Ct. 1795 (2002). See also Muhammad v. Close, 540 U.S. 749 (2004) (holding that the Heck-Edwards bar applies to prison misconduct challenges only when good-time credits are implicated).

In Muhammad v. Close, 540 U.S. 749 (2004), the Supreme Court clarified that Edwards requires the favorable termination of a disciplinary proceeding before a civil rights action may be filed only in cases where the duration of the prisoner’s sentence is affected. See Johnson v. Coolman, No. 03-1909, 2004 WL 1367271, at *1 (6th Cir. June 15, 2004). In other words, Edwards still applies where a plaintiff has lost good time as the result of the misconduct conviction. Under Michigan law, a prisoner loses good time credits for the month of his major misconduct disciplinary conviction. See MICH. COMP. LAWS § 800.33. In addition, the warden may order forfeiture of previously accumulated credits in cases. Id. Accordingly, Plaintiff’s claim remains noncognizable under § 1983 because a ruling on the claim would, if established, necessarily imply the invalidity of his disciplinary conviction. See Shavers v. Stapleton, No. 03-2210, 2004 WL 1303359, at *1 (6th Cir. June 9, 2004).

Under Michigan law, a prisoner may seek a rehearing of a decision made by the Hearings Division within thirty calendar days after a copy of the Misconduct Report is received. MICH. COMP. LAWS § 791.254; Policy Directive 03.03.105, ¶ DDD. Upon denial of his motion for rehearing, a prisoner may file an application for leave to appeal in the state circuit court. See MICH. COMP. LAWS § 791.255(2); Policy Directive 03.03.105, ¶ GGG (concerning appeal). If he is not successful, he may then seek to overturn the convictions.

Plaintiff alleges that Defendants wrote false misconducts against him in retaliation for exercising his First Amendment rights to file grievances and law suits. Plaintiff's claims that he was convicted of false, retaliatory misconducts written by Officers Suardini and Irvine are barred by the doctrine of Heck v. Humphrey, 512 U.S. 477 (1994).

Moreover, in the opinion of the undersigned, Plaintiff's retaliation claims fail on the merits. Retaliation based upon a prisoner's exercise of his or her constitutional rights violates the Constitution. See Thaddeus-X v. Blatter, 175 F.3d 378, 394 (6th Cir.1999) (en banc). In order to set forth a First Amendment retaliation claim, a plaintiff must establish that: (1) he was engaged in protected conduct; (2) an adverse action was taken against him that would deter a person of ordinary firmness from engaging in that conduct; and (3) the adverse action was motivated, in least in part, by the protected conduct. Thaddeus-X, 175 F.3d at 394. Moreover, Plaintiff must be able to prove that the exercise of the protected right was a substantial or motivating factor in the defendant's alleged retaliatory conduct. See Smith v. Campbell, 250 F.3d 1032, 1037 (6th Cir. 2001) (citing Mount Healthy City Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ. v. Doyle, 429 U.S. 274, 287 (1977)).

The filing of a prison grievance is constitutionally-protected conduct for which a prisoner cannot be retaliated against. See Smith v. Campbell, 250 F.3d 1032, 1037 (6th Cir. 2001); Hall v. Nusholtz, No. 99-2442, 2000 WL 1679458, at *2 (6th Cir. Nov. 1, 2000); Burton v. Rowley,

No. 00-1144, 2000 WL 1679463, at *2 (6th Cir. Nov. 1, 2000). However, Plaintiff has not provided sufficient evidence that there is a causal connection between Defendants' alleged adverse actions and the protected conduct of filing non-frivolous lawsuits and grievances. Defendants deny that they have ever threatened Plaintiff or refused him food or medical treatment. Most of the Defendants maintain that they were not even aware of Plaintiff's numerous lawsuits and grievances. Plaintiff's allegations lack credibility, and he has made similar allegations in eleven other lawsuits which have previously been dismissed. In the opinion of the undersigned, Plaintiff has not succeeded in demonstrating the existence of a genuine issue of material fact as to whether Defendants engaged in retaliatory conduct toward him. Therefore, Defendants are entitled to summary judgment.

Additionally, Defendants claim they are entitled to summary judgment on Plaintiff's Eighth Amendment claims. Plaintiff alleges that Defendants failed to protect him from assault by another prisoner and failed to take him to health care. The Eighth Amendment imposes a constitutional limitation on the power of the states to punish those convicted of crimes. In its prohibition of "cruel and unusual punishments," the Eighth Amendment places restraints on prison officials, directing that they may not use excessive physical force against prisoners and must also "take reasonable measures to guarantee the safety of the inmates." Farmer v. Brennan, 511 U.S. 825, 832 (1994) (quoting Hudson v. Palmer, 468 U.S. 517, 526-527 (1984)). To establish liability under the Eighth Amendment for a claim based on a failure to prevent harm to a prisoner, plaintiffs must show that the prison officials acted with "deliberate indifference" to a substantial risk that the defendant would cause prisoners serious harm. Farmer, 511 U.S. at 834; Helling v. McKinney, 509 U.S. 25, 32 (1993); Woods v. Lecureux, 110 F.3d 1215, 1222 (6th Cir. 1997); Street v. Corr. Corp. of Am., 102 F.3d 810, 814 (6th Cir.1996); Taylor v. Mich. Dep't of Corr. 69 F.3d 76, 79 (6th Cir.1995). See Curry v. Scott, 249 F.3d 493, 506 (6th Cir. 2001).

Plaintiff fails to prove that Defendants had actual knowledge that Plaintiff would be assaulted by another prisoner, by having feces thrown at him, or that Defendants consciously refused to take steps to protect him from injury. Defendants were unaware of any threat of injury to Plaintiff. Moreover, Plaintiff has provided no evidence that he was assaulted by prisoner McGee or that he suffered any injury from the alleged assault. In fact, Plaintiff received medical care on the date of the alleged assault and he had no injuries and no feces were detected on his person. Plaintiff has not succeeded in demonstrating the existence of a genuine issue of material fact as to whether Defendants exhibited deliberate indifference to an unreasonable risk of injury. Thus, Defendants are entitled to summary judgment. Because the Court is dismissing Plaintiff's Eighth Amendment claims, Plaintiff's conspiracy claim necessarily fails.

_____Alternatively, defendants move for qualified immunity. Government officials, performing discretionary functions, generally are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Dietrich v. Burrows, 167 F.3d 1007, 1012 (6th Cir. 1999); Turner v. Scott, 119 F.3d 425, 429 (6th Cir. 1997); Noble v. Schmitt, 87 F.3d 157, 160 (6th Cir. 1996); Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 818 (1982). An "objective reasonableness" test is used to determine whether the official could reasonably have believed his conduct was lawful. Dietrich, 167 F.3d at 1012; Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635, 641 (1987).

The procedure for evaluating claims of qualified immunity is tripartite: First, we determine whether a constitutional violation occurred; second, we determine whether the right that was violated was a clearly established right of which a reasonable person would have known; finally, we determine whether the plaintiff has alleged sufficient facts, and supported the allegations by sufficient evidence, to indicate that what the official allegedly did was objectively unreasonable in light of the clearly established constitutional rights. Williams v. Mehra, 186 F.3d 685, 690 (6th Cir. 1999).

When determining whether a right is clearly established, this court must look first to decisions of the United States Supreme Court, then to decisions of the Sixth Circuit and to other courts within this Circuit, and finally to decisions of other circuits. Dietrich, 167 F.3d at 1012. An official action is not necessarily protected by qualified immunity merely because the very action in question has not previously been held to be unlawful. Rather, in light of pre-existing law, the unlawfulness of the official's conduct must be apparent. Dietrich, 167 F.3d at 1012; Wegener v. City of Covington, 933 F.2d 390, 392 (6th Cir. 1991).

When making a qualified immunity analysis, the facts must be interpreted in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. Part of the analysis is to determine whether there are any genuinely disputed questions of material fact. Kain v. Nesbitt, 156 F.3d 669, 672 (6th Cir. 1998). Where there is a genuinely disputed question of fact, it is for the trier of fact to resolve, not the judge. “This would be true notwithstanding that the trial judge found the [defendant] officer to be more credible than the plaintiff because it is not for the court to make credibility determinations at this stage of the proceeding.” Id.

The operation of the qualified immunity standard depends substantially upon the level of generality at which the relevant legal rule is to be identified.

The contours of the right must be sufficiently clear that a reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates that right. This is not to say that an official action is protected by qualified immunity unless the very action in question has previously been held unlawful, but it is to say that in the light of the pre-existing law the unlawfulness must be apparent.

Anderson, 483 U.S. at 639-40. See also Durham v. Nu 'Man, 97 F.3d 862, 866 (6th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1157 (1997).

The Sixth Circuit has observed:

A right is not considered clearly established unless it has been authoritatively decided by the United States Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals, or the highest court of the state in which the alleged constitutional violation occurred.

Durham, 97 F.3d at 866 (citing Robinson v. Bibb, 840 F.2d 349, 351 (6th Cir. 1988)).

Thus, qualified immunity is not triggered only where the very action in question was previously held unlawful. Anderson, 483 U.S. at 639-40. Rather, the test is whether the contours of the right were sufficiently clear that a reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violated plaintiff's federal rights. Id.

Furthermore, a defendant need not actively participate in unlawful conduct in order to be liable under Section 1983. Rather, a defendant may be liable where he has a duty to protect a plaintiff and fails to comply with this duty. Durham, 97 F.3d at 866-868 (holding that a nurse and a security guard at a state hospital may be liable under Section 1983 where they do not take action to prevent a patient from being beaten). See also McHenry v. Chadwick, 896 F.2d 184 (6th Cir. 1990)(a correctional officer who observes an unlawful beating may be liable under Section 1983 even though he did not actively participate in the beating), and Bruner v. Dunaway, 684 F.2d 422 (6th Cir. 1982), cert. denied sub nom, Bates v. Bruner, 459 U.S. 1171 (1983)(police officers who stood by and observed an unlawful beating by fellow officers could be held liable under Section 1983).

When faced with a qualified immunity defense, the court must first determine whether or not the plaintiff has stated a claim upon which relief can be granted. Siegert v. Gilley, 500 U.S.

226, 232 (1991); Turner, 119 F.3d at 429. If the court answers that question in the affirmative, the court goes on to determine whether or not the right allegedly violated was clearly established. Turner, 119 F.3d 425. These are both purely legal questions. The immunity issue should not be resolved if there are factual disputes on which the issue of immunity turns such that it cannot be determined before trial whether the defendants' conduct violated clearly established rights. Hall v. Shipley, 932 F.2d 1147, 1154 (6th Cir. 1991).

In this case, Plaintiff has failed to meet his burden of showing that Defendants violated any clearly established law or that any official in Defendants' positions would have clearly understood that he was under an affirmative duty to refrain from such conduct. In the opinion of the undersigned, all Defendants are entitled to qualified immunity.

In summary, in the opinion of the undersigned, Plaintiff has failed to sustain his burden of proof in response to Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment. Accordingly, it is recommended that Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment (Docket #77) be granted and this case be dismissed in its entirety.

Further, if the court adopts this recommendation the court should decide that an appeal of this action would not be in good faith within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(a)(3). See McGore v. Wrigglesworth, 114 F.3d 601, 611 (6th Cir. 1997). For the same reasons that the court grants defendants' motion for summary judgment, the court can discern no good-faith basis for an appeal. It is recommended that should the plaintiff appeal this decision, the court assess the $455 appellate filing fee pursuant to § 1915(b)(1), see McGore, 114 F.3d at 610-11, unless plaintiff is barred from proceeding in forma pauperis, e.g., by the "three-strikes" rule of § 1915(g). If he is barred, he should be required to pay the $455 appellate filing fee in one lump sum.

NOTICE TO PARTIES: Objections to this Report and Recommendation must be served on opposing parties and filed with the Clerk of the Court within ten (10) days of receipt of this Report and Recommendation. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(C); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b); W.D. Mich. LCivR 72.3(b). Failure to file timely objections constitutes a waiver of any further right to appeal. United States v. Walters, 638 F.2d 947 (6th Cir. 1981). See also Thomas v. Arn, 474 U.S. 140 (1985).
